The Collinsville tradition began in 1889 and today, running 5,000 stud ewes, the enterprise continues to be a significant parent stud - the Merino and Poll Merino breed needs Collinsville at the forefront and with the infused passion from the Millington and Dalla families and their staff, we are confident that the studs most productive days are still to come.

Collinsville genetics have proved both reliable and predictable and when they provide rich stud wool rams to the market - they breed on. Their 2018 team has been deliberately selected for rich, stud wools on well grown robust bodies.

053, the team leader was judged 2018 Riverina Wool Ram of the Year. He does it with ease - weighing 122kgs early August, he is an uncomplicated plainer-bodied sire with a flowing apron, long soft muzzle and long body. 70mil at Bendigo - he rivals the better staple lengths going around - but his rich stamp of lustrous wool is 'stud sire' gold!

Watch out when we stand over this 'top of the tree' package in Adelaide 2018.

A robust, square-bodied, alert ram with abundant width of body. (114kg early August) Again a soft, pure nose. He was a Hay Sheep Show class winner and with plenty of staple length he combines meat and wool productivity.

A solid, deep-sided poll with character of muzzle. 111kg early August. A clean poll and good width of hip. He carries free-growing well-nourished wool. He is well-covered and a sound all rounder. A productive meat and wool type!

A tall, long-bodied sire with barrel and bone (118kg early August). A placid natured ram with a strong open face that stands square behind. With soft nose, thick ears and underline he grows heavy-cutting thick, rich, deeply-stamped ram-breeding stud wool. We believe 358 to be in the very top handful of stud sires to be offered this year.

This sheep is on the move and could well take the mantle as a sale 'super star.'

Massive poll ram. 128kg early August. His bone, growth and shape is 'right out there!' Possibly a ram to improve ewe flocks. Maybe for studs looking to up the 'ante' on their lower growth ewes. The poll merino breed needs to continually improve its depth and this sire has the potential to do that. Any stud with a ewe base to the 'standard' of this ram will be well set to be set to conquer the poll merino world!!
